An Exploration of You

Purposeful questions for discovering what's next for you.

By Jane Deuber

To find the next evolution of what's possible for you and your business, you've got to pause, take a breath and go on a quest for new answers. Whether you are just starting out in business or are a seasoned pro with revenues flowing, powerful, purposeful, questions are the portal to defining what's next for you and your business.

Step 1: Get curious about what's meaningful to you

What pisses you off or what breaks your heart?

What do you truly care about?

In the world you play in, what MUST change?

What do the people you serve desperately need?

Step 2: Reflect on the path you have traveled

Where in your past have you experienced loss, fear, confusion or sadness?

How did that feel at the time you were experiencing it?

What do you feel for others who have experienced this?

Step 3: Celebrate how kickass you are

What have you done to overcome those challenges you faced?

What skills have you developed to cope with this plight?

What do others need to know in order to overcome this same challenge?

How are you now uniquely qualified to serve others who are on this path?

Step 4: Explore what's possible from this place of possibility

Given all you have experienced and overcome, what is your superpower?

What unmet goal or dream still lies within you?

What revenue opportunities have you not yet pursued?

What bold, audacious project are you meant to take on?
